When cornets and trumpets first started being produced in 1929, they used a separate serial number sequence. It is said that trombones maintained a separate sequence until October of 1953 when they combined at 100000, but so far, examples do not bear this out. Unless trombone production greatly increased after WWII, which is hard to prove when so few examples show up, serial numbers were likely combined in the mid-1940s. When I drew a dual graph showing both lists, they join right at the start of WWII.

323000	1960	Olds now offers the Opera Fanfare & Opera Premier models for trumpet & trombone. They also have added the Ambassador & Recording bass trombones, the Super Bass, a 5-valve French Horn, the American & 4-valve baritones, and the Ambassador mellophones now are made in either piston valve, rotary valve, or bell forward models. The Opera trumpet came in a large 0.468" bore.

A large number of instruments listed here are from The Olds Register of trumpets and cornets which ended in 2009 and is preserved at Olds Central. The balance are from online auctions and private and public collections that I started adding in 2022.

Early trumpet and cornet serial numbers from 1929 until 1952 were compiled by Robb Stewart with input from R. Dale Olson, Alan Rouse, Eric Hamlin, and catalogs. Serial numbers from the mid-1950s on were supplied by Olds in the 1970s.

Early brass often had a bore size letter stamped on the middle valve casing. Following are examples that I have found.

S = small

SM = small/medium

M = medium = 0.453" for trumpets

M/SYM = slightly larger than M

LM = large medium

LLM = large large medium = medium bore through the tubing then a larger bell throat than the LM (c.1930 catalog)

SYM = Symphony bore = 0.462" for trumpets

Instruments marked from "Elkhart" or other locations are not by Olds, but rather by various other companies after the name was sold in 1980 to the National Educator's Music Co. The first offerings were made by Schenkelaars in the Netherlands, then they switched to Blessing in Elkhart in 1988. By 2005, they were being made by Blessing and Amati. The current brass using the Olds name in 2019 are stencils from Amati or Asia.
